Motion Picture News A Daily Feature In The Herald

This daily news feature of The Washington Herald is for the bene-fit of everybody interested in motion Suggestions, comments, criticisms, inquiries, and questions invited. Ad-dress communications to Motion Picture Editor, Washington Herald.

The ever absorbing question of divorce is the basis of a new Kay Bee feature entitled "Divorce." The story is woven about the unhappy married life of a young couple and is a powerful presentation of the evils of divorce except on sufficient grounds. The story briefly is as follows:

wife of Jim Forbes was discontented because of his low salary. It seemed hopeless that he should ever earn any larger amount—and she allowed herself encourage the attentions of a former tover, Robert White, a rich merchant. White desirer Anna for her beauty, and she decides to divorce Forbes to marry money. When she goes to her new husband, she leaves her little girl, Mildred, with Forbes, who is devoted to the child. He never lets Mildred knew the truth about her mother. Years later, Forbes falls sick—and Mildred finds employment as errand girl in a department store by as errand girl in a department store be-longing to Robert White. She is sent with a package to the White mansion, where she meets her mother. Anna has become just as discontented as a rich with a package to the White mansion, where she meets her mother. Annar has become just as discontented as a rich man's wife as she was with a poor man for her husband—impulsively, she tells the young girl who she is, begging her to come to her and she shall live in luxury the rest of her days. Mildred is sheek. the rest of her days. Mildred is shocked and repelled by her discovery, and the heartlessness of the woman, who claims to be her mother. She tells Anna that she would rather die poor than accept her offer-and goes home to give her father redoubled tenderness and loyalty, knowing now his sad secret.
